

THE SENGEBUND BALL.

A Medley of Music and Music-The Perfumes of Fountains and Flowers-A Mirthful Motley of Masquers-The Animal and Vegetable Kingdoms in Full Regalia-Cucumbers Waltzing with Dead Beets-Potatoes Promenading with Parsnips.

The grand Masked Ball of the Sengembund, at the Academy last evening, was really a most brilliant affair, and though heralded with little newspaper notoriety and blaring of trumpets, was, we think, in most respects, if not all, the finest affair of the season.

So far as the attendance, the variety and oddity of costumes, and the spirit of joviality characterizing the entertainment were concerned, it was as complete a success as could have been desired or anticipated; and in no particular were those participating doomed to disappointment. The instrumental portion of the music, by Birgfeld's orchestra and military band, and the vocal music by the Sengembund Society, with Carl Gaetner as director, were both excellent, as a matter of course. The programme of dances was as follows:-

- 1. Polonaise. 10. Waltz, Mazourka. 2. Waltz, Plan. 11. Lancers. 3. W. a. Schottische. 12. Waltz, Schottische. 4. Quadrille, Plan. 13. Waltz, Plan. 5. Waltz, Polka. 14. Quadrille, Mazourka. 6. Galop. 15. Waltz, Polka. 7. Quadrille, Polka. 16. Waltz, Plan. 8. Waltz, Plan. 17. Galop.

The costumes worn by the members of the Sengembund, more especially those worn by those performing the more prominent parts, were exceedingly neat, well fitting, and designed with taste. They were furnished by Mr. Charles Becker, of East Broadway, New York. To his establishment and that of Mr. Desmond, of our city, especial commendation is justly due. The dresses were universally admired, and contributed materially to the grandeur of the occasion.

The decorations of the Academy were not over gorgeous, but appropriate and becoming in appearance. They were entrusted to Mr. Christian Greiner, one of the Board of Managers, who was ably assisted by Mr. John L. Smith, of this city. They were arranged with precise uniformity, and deserve favorable notice.

The only slight discomfort experienced was at the ladies' wardrobe, there not being a sufficient number of attendants to wait upon the vast assemblage. When the ball exercises terminated, the incident rush at the narrow passage created considerable confusion, and although the squeezing and rough elbowing both males and females experienced from the crowding to and fro of the clamorous multitude was anything else than comfortable, it was, nevertheless, amusing; and the enacted scenes at times produced boisterous laughter, mingled with pleadings and requests in vain.

The decorations of the building was as fine as anything we have ever seen, American flags being displayed at every foot or two over the entire edifice. In the middle of the floor there was a fountain of scented water, surrounded by bouquets, and as the ladies passed, thousands of handkerchiefs were wet with this delicious perfume. The expense sustained by the Society in erecting this marble basin was exceedingly large, the cost of the perfumery alone amounting to upwards of $200.

The grand feature of the whole ball was the opening entries of all the various characters, and which represented every imaginable beast and reptile, from bears to bull-frogs. The line of the procession as formed was headed by Birgfeld's band, and was immediately followed by the personations of the newspapers of Philadelphia. Among the most prominent could be seen THE EVENING TELEGRAPH, with the latest news posted on its back and sides. Next came the polar bears, peacocks, ostriches, whisks, champagne bottles, foxes, etc. These were immediately followed by the "Prince Carnival" with the "Princess," who seated themselves on the throne prepared for the occasion.

As the procession had gradually passed the whole length of the stage, and had taken its place on the left hand, the signal was given, the curtain at the rear of the stage went up, and a grand German chorus, embracing many voices, could be heard; and gradually rising above the scenes, Apollo with his golden harp, and Polyhymnia leaning on his arm, attired most magnificently, had appeared among the clouds, where they remained until the chorus was completed, then descended and were presented, with numerous other characters, to his royal highness the Prince of Festivities.

Of all the numerous masquerades that have been given in the city during the past five or six winters, none were attended by such innumerable varieties of beasts, reptiles, fish, and birds, etc., of every description. The number of clouds, also, last evening, was astonishing, the fascinating character of the fool being represented by many on the floor. During the evening a new impersonation of "Waddiford" could be seen strolling through the darkened scenes with the ever-popular "Daughter of the Regiment" on his arm, which impersonation was assumed by about fifty of the fair sex. Chinese, Japanese, negroes, patriotic Irishmen (Fenians), and Indians were also in abundance, and their hideous contortions and awful attempts at the various lan guages were most distressing.

"Richard III" was at the ball, having on one arm the beautiful and magnificently attired "Queen Elizabeth," while on the other was resting affectionately the loving form of "Lady Anne." Occasionally the "crooked-backed tyrant" could be heard repeating, "Was ever woman in this humor won," as he went striding over the stage, and elicited considerable admiration.

Charles II" also figured conspicuously, and was attired in one of the handsomest suits on the floor. He was escorting a beautifully dressed lady, whose attire was entirely of silver cloth, and who presented a most brilliant appearance.

His "Satanic Majesty," with horns of every color, was also present, enjoying the festivities of the evening.

One of the prettiest features, as well as most patriotic emblems of the entertainment, was a company of children dressed in American flag.

They were received in the grand entrance with loud ovations of applause. "Jeff Davis in Petticoats" was also impersonated by a popular character, and was seen a greater part of the evening between men whose names we believe were "Maximilian" and "Leola Napoleon."

"Lucrèce Borgia" was also gracing the floor, being escorted by a popular young broker as "Gennaro."

"Coriolanus" and "King Lear" were walking arm in arm, and appeared to be greatly persecuted by an appling "Harlequin," who everlastingly insisted upon punching them with his magic wand.

The inimitable "Toodles" and "King Henry VI" appeared to be on intimate acquaintance, as we noticed that "Timothy" still retained his weakness of indulging in beer, and in fact, contaminated the morals of his associate, as both were decidedly funny in the latter part of the evening.

A character that represented a whiskey bottle, and had that name printed on its back, was one of the best impersonations of the evening, and staggering across the floor, was received with considerable applause and laughter.

The refreshment rooms—the Foyer of the Academy—were under the especial charge of Colonel Joseph Steppacher, and the supper was the best arranged of the season. The tables were tastefully set, and were literally loaded with the choicest cold cuts, turkey, chicken, tongue, salads, pates, game, pies, cakes, sauces, jellies, preserves, etc. At proper intervals bouquets adorned the tables, and lent a really pleasant fragrance to the rooms. Excellent coffee, tea, and chocolate were served to order, and were of better quality than usual. There was but one door left open for entrance, and another for exit from the refreshment saloons. At the first mentioned each person purchased a ticket for $1.50, and passing in, regulated himself or herself with everything edible that was to be found on the bill of fare. This arrangement gave general satisfaction, as every one received what was desired, as much as they wished, and were not annoyed by the presentation of checks bearing monetary characters of alarming significance. The supper-rooms were crowded from half-past 11 until after 2 o'clock, and the profits of this portion of the entertainment must have been considerable.

The bar in the basement was managed in the same style by Colonel Steppacher, tickets and not money being given for beverages, and although the crowd of bibbers was ever extensive, yet every one seemed to be satisfied. The police arrangements, under Lieutenant Paulin and his assistants, were as perfect as usual. Officers were moving about in all directions, but we observed no incident to mar the enjoyment of the occasion.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW CHERNUT STREET THEATRE.—Mr. Woolf has ordered his Journal in selecting the play which he calls the "Journal of Ten for transmutation. It is worthy the adapter and translator of the Glass of Water. The French play from which it is taken, is taken from a novel of Frederick Soule's, which has a little something like 'Une Maison de la Rue de Provence.' The plot is exceedingly obscure, the two first acts are intensely tiresome, and mean nothing. There is a little interest in the third act, and a fine situation at the end of the fourth. One great fault in the play is that the scenes have scarcely anything to do, and are even very little seen. Mr. Woolf had a part exactly in the style in which he acted a good, daring villain. His disguise as the "Usurer" was excellent, and the whole of his impersonation artistic and clever.

The other parts are so insignificant, even to Miss Orton's. Mrs. Keach did not know her part, and for the satisfaction of changing her dress occasioned a long stage wait. The other actors made as much of their parts as could be made, with the exception of Mr. Lewis, whose intentions may be good and aspirations great, but who is intensely awkward and ridiculous. Mr. Woolf in two first scenes, has introduced a little bit of low comedy, which told well with the galleries. The play condensed to three acts would be very effective. The scenery was effective, especially the "old curiosity shop," whose most admired drolleries were natural and artistic. We notice that Mr. Foster improves most rapidly, and is evidently in earnest.

ARCH STREET THEATRE.—Mrs. Waller made her appearance last evening before an enthusiastic audience. The Duchess of Malta was admirably performed. Mrs. Waller was called twice before the curtain. This great art, we are glad to see, will be thoroughly appreciated.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE.—Mr. Clarke plays this evening "Cousin Joe," and in the "Knights of the Round Table. No matter what Mr. Clarke plays, he has always full houses.

NEW AMERICAN THEATRE.—Walton's fun still fills this large and beautifully appointed theatre. The equestrian and acrobatic feats are very admirable, and are nightly received with rounds of applause. The management have made some engagements with well-known performers, whose names will be announced in due time.

FERRELLI'S "CLAIRISSA HARLOWE"—This splendid opera, which achieved such a marked success last Tuesday evening, will be repeated this evening at Concert Hall. Its rendition to-night will doubtless be even more perfect than that of last week, and another delightful musical treat may be anticipated. It is a decided novelty to see a grand opera produced for the first time in America by amateurs and led by the gifted composer himself; and this fact lends additional interest to Ferrelli's beautiful production. In Vienna his success was great in the hands of Medori and other celebrities, and it is much to the credit of the performers here that its performance on Tuesday evening last was fully successful enough to satisfy one of the most brilliant audiences ever assembled in a public hall in Philadelphia.

THE FREAK FAMILY.—These exquisite musical performers, both instrumental and vocal, are nightly greeted with crowded houses. Their management of the bells, from the tiniest toy to a good sized church bell, is something wonderful, and the delightful harmony which they produce calls out peals of applause. For the past two weeks they have crowded the large hall of the Assembly Building, and there is no apparent diminution of the interest which they have excited. They continue during the present week and introduce some novelties that will be worth seeing.

LECTURES.—A course of lectures is to be inaugurated before the Association on the Statistical, Civil, and Social Condition of the Colored People of Pennsylvania. The first will take place on the 8th of February, when Fred. Douglas will speak. The course ought to be a complete success.

The Rev. C. W. Demison, of Philadelphia, United States, has recently arrived from that country. Our readers will remember his visit to Manchester in 1863, in connection with George Griswold. Arrangements are being made, we understand, for him to speak on the present aspect of affairs in America. He is to lecture in the Mechanics' Institution, Secaucus, Wednesday evening, January 17.—Manchester Examiner.
